

5 Types of Cosmetic Dentistry and their benefits

1 - Inlays and Onlays

Inlay and onlay procedures are types of indirect fillings, used when a tooth is slightly decayed or when the tooth structure is too weak to support a filling. An inlay is added directly onto the surface of the tooth while an onlay is used to cover the entirety of the tooth's surface.

2 - Composite Bonding

This procedure is designed to repair damaged, decayed, or discolored teeth by using a material that resembles the actual color of the enamel. The dentist first drills out the deteriorated portion of the tooth before applying the composite onto the surface.

3 - Teeth Whitening

Teeth whitening or teeth bleaching is a basic cosmetic dentistry procedure. After plaque or tartar is removed from the teeth, they are whitened using special bleaching trays or lights.

4 - Dental Veneers

Veneers are manufactured using medical-grade ceramic for individual patients to closely resemble the original teeth. Each set is unique to the person, and they look just like original teeth.

5 - Implants

Dental implants are a replacement for teeth that have fallen out or are severely damaged. The dentist will insert a titanium screw into the jaw, which will serve as the support for the crown.

Felt Family Dentistry